Summary: This paper uses survey-to-survey imputation and a SWIFT-plus methodology to estimate poverty in Afghanistan following the Taliban’s return to power in August 2021. A machine learning model is trained on the 2019/20 Expenditure and Labor Force Survey and applied to the latest Afghanistan Welfare Monitoring Survey. Results show that 48.3 percent of the population was poor as of April–June 2023, a relative decline of 4 percentage points compared to the same period in 2020, with rural poverty declining while urban poverty remained stagnant.
